FireSafe Montana is a private, non-profit organization coordinating and supporting a statewide coalition of diverse interests working together to help Montanans make their homes, neighborhoods, and communities fire safe. As part of this program, the Broadus Volunteer Fire Department has gathered 500 individual structure assessments to help evaluate and mitigate wildfire risks to the community. These data are in paper format, and cannot be effectively used to create County-wide solutions in their present form.

The large, highly diverse Powder River County area and the Broadus Fire District have a dated fire resource map (2002) which has been updated over the years using markers and temporary fixes, and is not portable. Because of numerous changes in land use, jurisdictions, vegetation patterns, and access, it is no longer effective at portraying hazards, resources, structures, ownership, and access. Water resources, vegetation (and associated risks) need updating to provide a realistic portrayal of the wildfire and structural fire situation to the County, to the Fire Dept., and to the community.

This request includes specialized GIS services using Industry-standard software, data analysis, data creation, hazard analysis, map-production, and data organization for Powder River County and Broadus Fire Department District, for the purposes of public communication of hazards, portrayal and rapid evaluation of hazards and appropriate fire service response, and use of collected FireSafe structural assessments.

Products described below can be used to assist in updating the County Fire Plan, implement local community programs such as “Firesafe”, and providing rapid public and internal assessments of County hazards and needs; as well as in raising community awareness, developing hazard ratings, and increasing firefighter situational awareness and safety. The spatial analysis and maps can also be used as a pilot program for the use of FireSafe assessment data.

Firesafe Analysis

Objective: to create pre-planning information for community and professional use from existing hard copy wildfire hazard assessments completed in Powder River County. This will be coordinated with the Montana FireSafe Program as needed.

Deliverables: Develop an electronic form for ease of entering assessment data; create a database for all assessments; spatially reference with updated structure location spatial data: use Firesafe data with other spatial layers to create maps of geographic areas of concern and high fire hazard areas in the community.

Data: 500 paper field sheets having wildfire hazard reviews of residences and other structures in the District and digital lists of structure locations by GPS.

Results

The FIRESAFE electronic form and database was delivered and tested, and training was given in its use. The next step (in a future project) is to enter the 500 forms.

System requirements: Windows 7 operating system or above and computer having ACCESS 2013 installed.

The two documents are in the "FIRESAFEFormAndDatabase folder:

BroadusAnalysisDB091114Published.accdb is the database containing the form and report.

BroadusAnalysisDB_BackEnd.accdb is the database with the data table. This is linked to the form.

Install: Copy databases to a single folder location. When requested "enable" security.

Adjust location of BroadusAnalysisDB_BackEnd.accdb using the Linked Table Manager if needed.

Open BroadusAnalysisDB091114Published.accdb.

Open the form BaseDataFireSafeField091114 if it is not already open.

Enter form data. Follow screen directions. You can print reports for individual or all assessments using the print icons in the forms.

Make frequent backups of both databases.

See Appendix One for the Data Dictionary for the table. This is an electronic version of the FIRESAFE form with data table field names in bold. When enough form data are entered, this can be used to do future analysis of the data. Since form data is not available for analysis until it has been entered, we elected not to do spatial analysis in this project. For the spatial linkage, we elected to use the ADDRESS field to link to Powder River County Structure data.

Wall Resource Map

Objective: To provide a new large format map of the Fire District for use as a FireSafe tool, a planning tool for the County, and local use by the Broadus Volunteer Fire Department and others.

Deliverables: hard copy and electronic copy of District wall map, including updated road system, ownership, fire protection zones, jurisdiction and ownership, topography, present vegetation cover (including recent fire scars), and logistics. This will include location and kind of water resources using local data.

Appendix Two contains a list of all addressed structures and their index numbers. These can be used to locate an address on the County Resources map side using the top and side index grids.

Data: local fire department data; County, Forest Service, BLM, and State data; as well as updated topography and aerial imagery. This data is contained in the "SpatialData" folder referenced below. Structure data may be updated in quality using recent imagery, County 911 data, local inventories, and DNRC structure data. All updated data layers and maps will be provided to County GIS and to the Fire Dept. All maps will be field-checked.

Results

Three reviews of draft maps were conducted with Powder River County and city personnel. A final field review was conducted. Eight copies of final 60 inch by 60 inch maps are delivered. This map reflects conditions represented by the data as of its publication date of June of 2014. County-provided data was used. A CD with all GIS maps and data is delivered. Spatial structure data were reviewed and a map was provided of anomalies for future review by Powder River GIS personnel. Recommendations for equipment upgrades were made to the County.

Final Delivery:

This Document describing products and use.

FIRESAFE Form, table, report in two ACCESS 2013 databases

Eight copies of Final County Resources Map, with two laminated.

Electronic data and GIS information: The printable pdf is: PowderRiverCountyEmergency091514.pdf. The GIS file used to create this is: PowderRiverCountyEmergency091514FinalRelativePaths.mxd. This is a "relative path" document, and refers to the spatial data in the folder "SpatialData".

Possible Future Work:

Updates of FIRESAFE form/table/report. Additional products might include standard ACCESS queries with searchable fields, maps with resource designators, maps of structures having colors for ratings of safety or operational hazards. Maps with wildfire hazards (including values at risk, access, fire likelihood, and survivability). These data can also be converted to Run Map Books, Wildland Fire

Briefing Maps, and other tactical resource maps.

Structure and road updates using aerial imagery.

FIRESAFE analysis and reporting for Powder River County and future FIRESAFE work.

Linkage of FIRESAFE data to Incident preplanning operations.

Map Updates as data is updated or objectives change.

Specialty Maps, such as a "Run book" of detailed information for emergency use.

Thanks for your business!

Appendix One. Data Dictionary for the FIRESAFE Data Form

Wildfire Hazard Assessment Checklist (Annotated with Field List for Data Table 090614, and Field names in Table BaseDataFireSafeField070214 are in bold.

Automatically Assigned Unique Assessment ID ID

Homeowner: HomeOwner

Address: Address

Inspection Date: InspectionDate

Inspected By: InspectedBy

The following inspection and its checklist can be used to determine your home's susceptibility to wild fire intrusion and to give you specific instructions on how to mitigate that risk. Addressing the conditions, noted on the checklist, can significantly reduce your risk rating. The checklist components are a compilation of those found in the National Firewise Program and various state FireSafe programs.

STRUCTURE IGNITION ZONE

Roof

- Roof covering or assembly is NOT resistant to burning ember ignitions. RoofNotResistant

Recommendation: The roofing material is highly susceptible to ember ignitions. The greatest threat from combustible roofing material is the potential for embers to become embedded underneath and catch fire. When roofing material requires maintenance or repair, consider replacing the roofing material with asphalt shingles, metal, clay tile or other fire resistant/non-combustible materials.

Roof contains combustible debris/litter (leaves, pine needles, etc.) easily ignited by embers.

RoofContainsDebris

Recommendation: The roof and roof valleys contain combustible debris and litter which embers could land in igniting the roofing material or underlayment. Remove all combustible debris and litter from roof on a regular basis especially before and during wildfire season.

Roof materials are aging or in poor condition and/or provide openings for ember entry.

RoofAging

Recommendation: Due to its condition, your roofing material is highly susceptible to ignition from fire embers preceding the fire front. The threat from aging material or material in poor condition is the potential for embers to become embedded in or underneath and ignite burning into the wood underlayment and into the structure. As soon as possible, consider replacing the roofing material with asphalt shingles, metal clay tile or other fire resistant/non-combustible materials.

RoofComments

Roof Ventilation – Gable & Soffit Vents

- Roof venting provides openings or vents that allow ember entry to attic or interior of structure.

RoofVentOpen

Recommendation: The attic gable vents are inadequately protected, creating a potential entryway for burning embers. Blowing embers or firebrands can precede a wildfire and blow into small spaces or openings which can then ignite the home. Consider covering all attic vents with 1/8-inch (maximum) corrosion resistant, non-combustible, metal wire mesh. Wire screen can be attached to the inside of the vent allowing for adequate ventilation yet prohibiting embers from entering. Additional vents may need to be required to ensure proper air flow and ventilation as per local building codes. A properly screened vent will not adversely affect the visual appeal of the vent or structure; there are several brands of ember and fire resistant vents available to the public.

Rain Gutters

- Gutters are present and contain combustible debris/litter (leaves, pine needles, etc.) easily ignited by embers. . RoofGutters

Recommendation: The gutters contain dead leaves, pine needles, or other combustible materials which embers could land in igniting the structure. Smoldering or flaming debris in the gutter can ignite roofing material or the tar paper/ply wood underlayment thus burning down the structure. Remove all dead leaves and pine needles on a regular basis especially before and during wildfire season.

Eaves

- Open eaves contain combustible materials (dead leaves, animal nests, etc.) or openings and/or cracks that allow ember entry to structure. RoofEaves

Recommendation: The eaves are not boxed, and the construction creates a potential ember trap. Even though the wood eaves are well maintained, embers could be blown into these small spaces and ignite the combustible materials, which could then burn into the house. Regularly inspect the eaves and remove all fine fuels or accumulations of dead leaves and/or animal nesting materials. Consider caulking all cracks in wood and seams between wood. When eaves require maintenance or repair consider boxing the eaves with 5/8-inch sheathing or non-combustible materials.

Top of Exterior Wall to Foundation

- Structure contains openings (vents, crawl space, etc.) that will allow ember entry to interior of structure. ExteriorWallOpenings

Recommendation: The venting system along the roof eaves of the house has many 2 to 3 inch diameter holes, these holes are most likely screened from the inside, but they are in exposed wood and embers could easily collect in these holes. Blowing embers or firebrands can precede a wildfire and blow into small spaces or openings which can then ignite the home. Consider covering all eave vent holes on the outside with 1/8-inch (maximum) corrosion resistant, non-combustible, metal wire mesh.

- Structure has large, single-pane windows that could fracture and fall, allowing embers entry to interior of structure. ExteriorWindows

Recommendation: Installing glass products that can withstand the potential convective and radiant heat will reduce the risk of glass fracture and collapse. Any combustible vegetation close to windows that could provide intense radiant heat or flame contact should be pruned, moved or substituted with smaller, fire resistant varieties. Tempered glass or double paned glass windows will withstand much higher temperatures than plate glass and should be used in large windows, particularly windows overlooking slopes or combustible vegetation.

- Siding materials are NOT ignition-resistant/non-combustible and may be contacted by flames. ExteriorSiding

Recommendation: The risk to the home is the potential for embers to become embedded under and into the seams of combustible siding and catch fire. Make certain that all combustible vegetation and material debris is kept away from the structure. Ensure that all cracks and crevices are sealed. When exterior siding begins to deteriorate and requires maintenance or repair, consider replacing with ignition resistant material such as stucco, stone, brick, etc.

ExteriorComments

Structure – Attachments

- Combustible fencing, decking, trellis, or other attachment is connected to structure that will allow flames to reach structure. StructureAttach

Recommendation: A wood fence or gate is attached directly to the house. Any structure attached to the house should be considered part of the house. Embers could lodge in the wood or in burnable materials lodged within or around the wood, igniting the fence which could then burn into the house. A fence that catches fire can also burn under the home eaves or compromise windows allowing fire to enter the structure. Clean up all material along bottom of fence that could lead fire to the home. Consider installing metal flashing where the fence directly connects to the home or a metal fence section to get the wood fence away from the structure. When fence requires maintenance or repair consider replacing the wood fence, with non-combustible materials.

- Combustible materials are present atop combustible decking that can be ignited by embers (examples: patio cushions, coco mats/planters, brooms, etc.). StructureDecking

Recommendation: Embers could blow onto any burnable material that is on the combustible decking, igniting the deck which could then burn into the structure. Consider replacing combustible materials with fire resistant materials or remove all combustible materials off of deck during a wildfire.

- Combustible materials are present under combustible decking that can be ignited by embers or reached by flames. StructureUnderDeck

Recommendation: Underside of deck is unprotected, allowing embers to blow into any burnable material that may have collected there, igniting the deck which could then burn into the house. Clean all material from below deck that could lead fire to the deck and then to the structure. Consider installing 1/8-inch (minimum) corrosion resistant, non-combustible metal wire mesh around the perimeter of deck. When deck requires replacement consider replacing with fire resistant building materials.

StructureComments

LANDSCAPE IGNITION ZONE (Fuel modification Area) – Structure to 100 feet

- Continuous combustible vegetation exists that will allow fire to reach structure or combustible attachments (decking, fencing, trellis, etc.). LandscapeVeg

Recommendation: Ensure that there is a minimum 30 feet of defensible space around the perimeter of the home, if ownership allows. Defensible space improves the likelihood that the home will survive on its own if firefighters cannot reach it, if they can, it gives them space to safely fight the fire. Light flashy fuels and lack of defensible space significantly increases the risk of wildfire intrusion to the property. Trim lower branches a minimum of six feet above the ground, if tree height permits, and remove all accumulated dead and down material. Consider replacing regional burnable tree and shrub species with native fire resistant varieties. An excellent source of local vegetation recommendations can be found at www.firewise.org.

- Combustible materials exist that can ignite from embers or flame contact.

LandscapeMaterials

Describe: LandscapeMaterialsDesc

Recommendation: Embers could blow onto any burnable material that is on the combustible decking, igniting the deck, which could then burn into the home. Consider replacing combustible materials with non-combustible materials. Cover with a flame-resistant tarp or remove all burnable materials from the deck during a wildfire if time permits.

Additional structures present that can contribute to fire spread/behavior.

LandscapeStructures

Describe: LandscapeStructuresDesc

Recommendation: The owners garage is within close proximity of the home. This buildings siding is not yet completed, thus presenting exposure to flammable building materials. Nearby vegetative fuels are present that may ignite this building during a fire event. Protection of secondary buildings is just as crucial as protection of the main home. These structures can ignite and become a “bridge” between wildland fuels and the home.

- Continuous combustible vegetation exists that will provide intense fire behavior.

LandscapeIntense

Recommendation: The property is located within an area of unmanaged wildland fuels. Close proximity to unmanaged wildland fuels can significantly increase the risk of wildfire intrusion to the property. The wildland fuels might generate a considerable ember storm which could fall upon all burnable material adjacent to the structure. Continuous fuels can carry fire directly from the wildlands to the structure. On homeowner property, consider thinning unmanaged fuels into islands spaced twenty-five feet apart. Trim lower branches a minimum of six feet above the ground, if tree height permits, and remove all accumulated dead and down material. Consider replacing regional burnable tree and shrub species with native fire resistant varieties. An excellent source of local vegetation recommendations can be found at www.firewise.org.

OVERVIEW OF THE SURROUNDING ENVIRONMENT

(Environmental Hazard Zone/ Wildland Urban Interface) – Existing 100 feet or more from structure

Topography

- Topographical or environmental features exist that contribute to severe wildland fire behavior. LocationTopo

Describe: LocationTopoDesc

- Location of home on slope increases wildfire risk. LocationSlope

Describe: _____ LocationSlopeDesc _____

In addition to local weather conditions, slope, aspect and topographic features contribute greatly to a fires behavior. Fire speeds increase significantly with upslope topography.

- Location of structure in relation to canyons, valley, saddle and/or gullies increases wildfire risk. LocationValley

Describe: _____ LocationValleyDesc _____

Canyons, ravines and saddles are topographic features that are prone to higher wind speeds than adjacent areas.

Combustible Fuels

- Other residences exist within Ignition Zone (<100 ft. from structure).

LocationOtherResid100

Describe: _____ LocationOtherResid100Desc _____

Neighboring homes are in close proximity and have not mitigated their exposure to wildland fire.

- Volatile vegetation exists adjacent to Ignition Zone (100+ ft. from structure).

Addressing the issues documented on the checklist can reduce your overall risk rating. If you have questions about this assessment or about how to mitigate your homes risk please visit www.firesafemt.org/resources or call 406-431-8718

This assessment and its recommendations regarding changes that should be considered to help protect your property are designed to give your home the greatest likelihood of surviving a wildfire event. Even if every recommended step is taken, your property could still be destroyed because wildfire is unpredictable and can be impossible to stop or control. No warranties or representations of any kind are provided to the recipient of this evaluation. Granite County, FireSafe Montana, and the organization and individual performing this assessment are in no way liable or responsible for damage to your home or property from wildfire.
